Annual Report 2013

Global Mamas

Including a look back at the last decade with the founding Mamas!

A Decade of Prosperity
Since 2003, we’ve been focused on reinvesting our revenue in the Mamas. In fact, since inception, more than 30 percent of revenue has been paid directly to the Mamas in wages. Artisans (and employees too!) have done some pretty incredible things with these wages. From batiker Aggie Cole Arthur, who put herself through college, to Wisdom, our Cape Coast general manager, who rose through the ranks from quality control employee to production manager before running our entire Cape Coast site, everyone has experienced tremendous growth in the past ten years.

At our heart, Global Mamas exists to provide prosperity to women in Ghana. But what does prosperity really mean? We believe it goes beyond economic well-being: it also encompasses happiness and health for all who work with Global Mamas. We have come a long way in our first decade and we are excited to continue our progress into the next decade. Our impact so far is detailed in the following pages. Looking into the future, the Mamas are focused on sustaining their prosperity and extending opportunities to new Mamas. Please take a moment to read our plan on page 12, for an eco-concious production facility that will employ 200 women. This will be a huge task, but we are ready to leverage our strength to achieve our goals.

Here’s to another decade of prosperity!

Renae Adam              Kristin Johnson
Co-Founder             Co-Founder

At our volunteer house in Cape Coast, Ghana, we still have the dilapidated suitcase that held our first shipment of sundresses and bags produced by Cape Coast batikers and seamstresses in 2003. It’s a reminder of how far we’ve come and all the dreams that have been achieved since we put that suitcase of products on a plane from Accra to Minneapolis.

As we look back on the decade that has passed, we are utterly humbled by the strides we’ve made together. From the six founding Mamas (Alice, Elizabeth, Emma, Esther, Hannah, and Florence—see where they are now on page six) we’ve grown to providing economic opportunities to nearly six hundred women at nine locations. From just one employee, Patience (read her story on page nine) we’ve grown to 55. And, thanks to our loyal retail partners, we’ve gone from distribution in Ghana and the U.S. to a global presence in more than twenty-four countries.

But some things haven’t changed. We’ve always been focused on providing steady work and opportunities for women so they can obtain the education, technology, and capital they need to meet personal and professional goals. We hear from Mamas time and time again that they appreciate our ability to pay them promptly—often a challenge for many employers in Ghana, and indeed a challenge faced by Mamas who own their own businesses. Paying on time is just one piece of our commitment to fair wages. Because we take fair wages so seriously, we engaged a volunteer team in summer 2013 to ensure we’re paying a fair wage to producers and employees at all of our sites in Ghana. Find out how volunteers Sarah and Jessica tackled this challenge on page 10.

A Decade in Perspective: A Note From Our Founders

At our volunteer house in Cape Coast, Ghana, we still have the dilapidated suitcase that held our first shipment of sundresses and bags produced by Cape Coast batikers and seamstresses in 2003. It’s a reminder of how far we’ve come and all the dreams that have been achieved since we put that suitcase of products on a plane from Accra to Minneapolis.

As we look back on the decade that has passed, we are utterly humbled by the strides we’ve made together. From the six founding Mamas (Alice, Elizabeth, Emma, Esther, Hannah, and Florence—see where they are now on page six) we’ve grown to providing economic opportunities to nearly six hundred women at nine locations. From just one employee, Patience (read her story on page nine) we’ve grown to 55. And, thanks to our loyal retail partners, we’ve gone from distribution in Ghana and the U.S. to a global presence in more than twenty-four countries.

But some things haven’t changed. We’ve always been focused on providing steady work and opportunities for women so they can obtain the education, technology, and capital they need to meet personal and professional goals. We hear from Mamas time and time again that they appreciate our ability to pay them promptly—often a challenge for many employers in Ghana, and indeed a challenge faced by Mamas who own their own businesses. Paying on time is just one piece of our commitment to fair wages. Because we take fair wages so seriously, we engaged a volunteer team in summer 2013 to ensure we’re paying a fair wage to producers and employees at all of our sites in Ghana. Find out how volunteers Sarah and Jessica tackled this challenge on page 10.

2003
- Global Mamas begins with six founding Mamas.

2004
- Patience Essibu, our first employee, is hired to provide bookkeeping training to help Mamas better manage their growing businesses.
- Eli-Emma Batik is the first workshop built with income from Global Mamas.

2005
- Acceptance into the Fair Trade Federation.
- Develop our signature African Spirit Good Luck Charm.

2006
- Launch our bead location in Odumase Krobo with a grant from the British High Commission.
- Partner with Design For Life and work with British designers to create the Retro Dress.

2007
- Acceptance into the World Fair Trade Organization.
- Design the first Urban Explorer Bag, ensuring scrap fabric could be utilized instead of burned.

2008
- Open the Global Mamas Fair Trade Store in Accra.

2009
- Introduce the Global Mamas wholesale website.
- Cape Coast batiker, Louisa Esi Dadzi, is the first apprentice of a Mama to open her own business.
- Cape Coast batiker, Aggie Cole Arthur, sends herself to college using Global Mamas income.
- Reach $1 million in annual sales.

2010
- Open Fair Trade Textile Workshop, our batiking and sewing center directly employing Mamas in Pram Pram.
- Dreams of the Fair Trade Zone begin.
- First child of a Mama to graduate from college with tuition paid from Global Mamas income.

2011
- Cape Coast batiker, Aggie Cole Arthur sends herself to college using Global Mamas income.
- Reach $1 million in annual sales.

2012
- Supported by a grant from the Embassy of France, move Fair Trade Textile workshop from Pram Pram to Ashaiman to provide economic opportunity to larger population.

2013
- Initiated strategic planning process for the next decade of prosperity.
- Developed architectural plans to build the Fair Trade Zone (read more on page 12).

2014
- First child of a Mama to graduate from college with tuition paid from Global Mamas income.
CELEBRATING 10 YEARS
In 2003 we started from a few small seeds

Today we produce in 7 locations

Currently we partner with 569 Mamas

Now our products are sold to 373 retail partners in 21 countries, with new countries including...

Columbia
Finland
China
Brazil

We have hosted 488 volunteers

In 2013, Global Mamas earned $1,150,925.52
Making the total paid to Mamas $398,949.48

A Look at the Books - 2013

Revenue From Product Sales
Product Sales $1,153,472
Cost of Goods Sold $619,567
Total Revenue From Product Sales $533,905

Contributed Support
Public Support $46,179
Volunteer Contributions $72,023
Total Revenue From Contributed Support $118,202

Expenses
Program Services $619,098
Fundraising Expenses $4,191
Management & General $7,024
Total Expenses $630,313
Change in Net Assets $21,794

MEASURING OUR IMPACT

In Ghana

51% of the population lives on less than $2/day
88% of workers in the craft industry have access to social security
17% of the general public has health insurance
34% of workers in the craft industry work more than 50 hours/week

100% of Global Mamas producers receive ON-THE-JOB TRAINING

education = success

Global Mamas pays 13% of total paychecks to social security, ensuring producers have access to retirement funds and FREE national healthcare

Increased wages leads to an IMPROVED STANDARD OF LIVING

Each Mama supports an average of 2 more people outside of their immediate family
Cape Coast it can be up to nine others

The Mamas are hoping to build prosperity in their own communities by paying school fees for up to six children who are not their own

15% own a car
30% own a house
75% own a tv
95.7% of Mamas’ school aged children are in school

If they work overtime, they receive time & a half pay

52% own a self contained toilet
64% save for the future, after expenses

5% own education = success

The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.
The original study was done in 2008. Average GNI growth rate per year (7%) was used to estimate the increase in average wages between 2008 and June, 2013. The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.

The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.
The original study was done in 2008. Average GNI growth rate per year (7%) was used to estimate the increase in average wages between 2008 and June, 2013. The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.

The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.
The original study was done in 2008. Average GNI growth rate per year (7%) was used to estimate the increase in average wages between 2008 and June, 2013. The Labour Market in Ghana, p. 35. SARK, December 2009.
In honor of our decade of prosperity, we gathered the founding Mamas to reminisce on how far we’ve come since they started the organization with co-founders Kristin and Renae in 2003. Alice, Esther, Emma, Florence, and Hannah came from around Cape Coast to share their memories. Keeping with the Ghanaian tradition of starting meetings with a prayer, they united their voices to give thanks before they began the discussion. Though one Mama, Eli, was not able to attend, we hope you feel the collective passion of the Mamas as you read their story in their own words.

Think back to 2003. What do you remember most about founding Global Mamas?

Esther: One day, Kristin and Renae came to my sewing shop and told me about Women in Progress, an organization they were founding to help women in Ghana. They asked me, if I had the opportunity to work with the organization, would I do it? And I said, “Wow! Yes, of course.” Life wasn’t easy back then. [Esther laughs, remembering.] It was difficult. So, they asked me to sew a dress. They didn’t have a pattern then, but I gave it my best effort.

Emma: I started as the only batiker at Women in Progress. I knew Renae and Efua [the Mamas call Kristin Efua, the Ghanaian name for people born on Friday] from when they were here as Peace Corps volunteers [in the early 1990s] and they wanted to help girls who had dropped out of school. They founded a women’s center and I became a batiking teacher there.

Hannah: Yes, Efua also wanted to help the women financially so they were not always dependent on their husbands. She formed the Progressive Women’s Credit Union [also part of the women’s center]. When she was finally leaving for the U.S., I called her and said, “Efua, why don’t you take some of our samples to find a market for them in America?” And she went home and started what we called a “suitcase business.”

Florence: After selling those first products, Efua came back to help us start fresh.

Emma: She had a suitcase full of fabric for us to batik!

Alice: I was a student in the second batch of batikers trained at the women’s center. My teacher was [founding Mama] Auntie Emma. [All laugh.] I also learned sewing. One day I was in Bakaano [area in Cape Coast where the women’s center was located] when a customer came and asked me to make a skirt in two hours. So I did, and she came again the next day. Today we are still here as an organization. [The room erupts in cheers].

What’s the story behind the name Global Mamas?

Hannah: We started as Women in Progress. Then things started booming and people around the world were buying our products, so it became a global affair. We are all mothers, so we changed the name to Global Mamas because every family has a mama.

As you look back, what’s your favorite memory?

Emma: Mine is when Kristin and Renae brought a suitcase with twenty shirts for me to batik. I was so happy to have so much work! Yes! I could help my husband with school fees and other expenses.
Continued from page 6>>>

Hannah: One time there was a 500 shirt order and everyone, all the volunteers, came to my shop. They all worked. In fact, we didn’t sleep. Everyone was rushing in to help out. It was a family affair. Oh, the volunteers! They don’t just come here to sightsee. They come to work, to discuss business plans, and to share ideas and visions. They are very inspiring. So we thank them for their impact and knowledge.

Esther: When we started we had no patterns, we so we learned from our mistakes and brought changes.”

Since my childhood, I have had the feeling of wanting to help people, and now I feel I am helping people, because I can buy machines for other seamstresses in need.

Hannah: If you look at Global Mamas now, there are a lot of people who have been helped.

Is anyone thinking of retirement, or are you as young as you were 10 years ago?

Hannah: Just look at me. [She struts around the room.] People think I am 40, look at me! I am still young because of Global Mamas.

Alice: When you look at all the work, we are very busy and it keeps us very active.

What does prosperity mean to you?

Esther: The definition of prosperity is what you want. I understand what it means; it means something different for each of us.

Emma: As human beings, our purpose in this world is to prosper and achieve. I have set my goals. It is very hard, but I know I will achieve them.

Hannah: I think everyone who works with Global Mamas would say they have prospered. Global Mamas made a family; it united women. Global Mamas made a family; it united women.

Have we ever asked you to make a strange or surprising product?

Hannah: [Laughing.] Yes, I was asked to make a dog’s dress. [Others laugh and wonder how a dog would be now?]

What is your most exciting personal accomplishment since starting Global Mamas?

Emma: Global Mamas has helped me a lot. My husband and I had no money to finish building our house. So I started working with Global Mamas, and thanks to the money I earned we were able to build our house and my workshop. It also helped me to pay my children’s school fees. [Note: Although Ghanaian public schools are free at the primary level, secondary schools operate on a fee basis. Additionally, many families choose to send their children to private schools in hopes of higher quality education.]

Florence: I am very proud to be a Global Mama. I am proud because it has helped meet my family’s needs. Because of Global Mamas, we are all trained ladies with money and now we want to help others.

Hannah: Yes, it has helped our families and beyond. It has put smiles on so many faces. In fact, because of Global Mamas, I have been able to buy my own machines.

Alice: I am very proud to be a Global Mama. I am proud because it has helped meet my family’s needs. Because of Global Mamas, we are all trained ladies with money and now we want to help others.

What is your dream for Global Mamas in the next 10 years?

Alice: In the next 10 years, Global Mamas will grow at every level.

Hannah: I am praying that Global Mamas keeps growing. I wish Global Mamas all the best. We are all going to have a lot of Mamas in and around Cape Coast, and even all around the world.

Patience Essibu: Our First Employee Shares Her Story

Patience Essibu: For our first employee, Patience Essibu, it is hard to believe that she has been creating prosperity in Ghana for a decade. As Global Mamas has grown, Patience has grown with it. She remembers that on her first day of work, “the computer was in front of me and I thought ‘what do I do?’. After I studied the spreadsheets and understood expectations, I gained the insight, the technical know-how.”

Even then, Patience enjoyed keeping financial records and making sure that the Mamas were learning this valuable skill—important work that Patience still does today.

Though working for a small start-up nonprofit had its challenges, Patience recalls that from the beginning Global Mamas was a “real family.” She fondly remembers holding meetings with co-founder Renae over Fan Ice, the popular Ghanaian ice cream. She also remembers processing just a few orders in 2003 and sending them to the U.S. in a single suitcase. She is still amazed that monthly orders fill an entire van. She beams as she shares all that seamstresses and batiketers have learned about quality over the years, saying: “As we grew we learned from our mistakes and brought changes.”

With a degree in management studies from the University of Cape Coast, Patience believes that product innovation has been the key to success. “Every organization, if you want to stay relevant, you need to innovate and provide new products to your customers.” Global Mamas has grown to work with 67 Mama business owners in Cape Coast and more than 500 women across Ghana, expanding beyond batiketed apparel and home décor to include recycled glass beaded jewelry and ornaments, as well as shea butter skin care products.

Over the years, Patience has earned promotions and taken on new challenges. Among other responsibilities, she manages eight quality control staff members, which she says is difficult but always interesting. For their part, the staff is fond of her for her poise and kindness. In the words of quality control staff member Hubert, “She always wants to know you have done the right thing and she is extremely organized.” His coworker Christiane agrees, noting that Patience encourages the staff “like a mother” and that her name reflects her approach to work: “Words can’t explain the amount of patience she has, that is why she is called Patience! You always see her laughing, smiling, and most importantly caring.”

“It’s because of the passion and the mission of Global Mamas that I stay.”

- Patience Essibu

Patience with her eldest daughter Philippa.

Amid all this praise, Patience remains humble. When complimented on her professional accomplishments, she just says, “The glory goes to God.” And she makes it clear that she’s excited about another decade of prosperity with Global Mamas, saying, “It’s because of the passion and the mission of Global Mamas that I stay. I see that we are helping African women to help their families by giving them regular orders for sewing and batiketing work. I believe prosperity has been achieved. So I think being part of this mission is a great thing to do.”
Sara, a student at the University of South Carolina, focused her work on comparisons of textile workers’ wages around the world and the selection of important benchmarking tools. Jessica, a student at Franklin University Switzerland who now works for Global Mamas in the U.S. office, focused her time on data analysis and the creation of a formula for salary multipliers. These salary multipliers help to ensure that Mamas facing different costs of living because of their location are similarly compensated for their work. A Mama in Cape Coast with the same skill sets as a Mama in Ashaiman may need a higher wage since her cost of living is higher.

With this in mind, Sara and Jessica worked with co-founder Renae Adam to make immediate and direct changes to Mamas’ salaries, increasing salaries by an average of 12 percent. We can now say with confidence that we offer living wages to our Mamas. This was a highlight for Sara who says, “my favorite part about being in Ghana was getting to not only learn about the culture and how things are run but also being able to see firsthand the opportunity and difference Global Mamas makes for its employees.”

Volunteer Highlight: Living Wage Project

Adventures Across Ghana
From the colorful and bustling streets of the city, to the taste of sizzling fried plantains on the beach and the vibrant sound of music and chatter in the local market, life as a volunteer in Ghana is always an adventure. Every city is unique and every Mama has her own story to tell. Summer 2013 volunteers Jessica Fox and Sara Klein got to experience this rich diversity, traveling across the country and immersing themselves in many aspects of Ghanaian life. They tiptoed across rope bridges 130 feet up in the air at the Kakum National Park and explored the Togo mountain range in Ho. They met people from all different walks of life, exchanging stories and forging new memories.

In addition to the plethora of cultural, linguistic, and experiential diversity they saw across Ghana, they also saw firsthand some drastic economic differences. While a refreshing drink with the Mamas in the bead making village of Krobo may cost you only some spare change, along the beach in Accra the price rivals that of a U.S. city. Quantifying these differences in the cost of living is an enormous task and one that Global Mamas has been pursuing for quite some time. Jessica and Sara helped us tackle this question as we strive to ensure that all Mamas in all locations receive a living wage.

Defining a Living Wage
While our entry level wages have always been between 20-30 percent higher than Ghana’s minimum wage and Mamas’ salaries are adjusted annually for inflation and individual performance, it is important that our employees receive a fair and living wage within their communities. This living wage should cover and surpass all basic needs such as food, rent, utilities, education, clean drinking water, clothing, transportation, medical expenses, and savings. To calculate the cost of living for our Mamas, Sara and Jessica used a data set created by past volunteers, including Angela Jo and Paivi Pöyhönen. This data was based on 66 employee interviews across four production locations and five in-depth interviews with third party organizations, including the Ghana Internal Revenue Service and the Ghana Trade Union Congress. Sara and Jessica’s were tasked with analyzing and benchmarking this data with other academic studies to create the most accurate picture of the costs faced by our Mamas.

Sara, a student at the University of South Carolina, focused her work on comparisons of textile workers’ wages around the world and the selection of important benchmarking tools. Jessica, a student at Franklin University Switzerland who now works for Global Mamas in the U.S. office, focused her time on data analysis and the creation of a formula for salary multipliers. These salary multipliers help to ensure that Mamas facing different costs of living because of their location are similarly compensated for their work. A Mama in Cape Coast with the same skill sets as a Mama in Ashaiman may need a higher wage since her cost of living is higher.

With this in mind, Sara and Jessica worked with co-founder Renae Adam to make immediate and direct changes to Mamas’ salaries, increasing salaries by an average of 12 percent. We can now say with confidence that we offer living wages to our Mamas. This was a highlight for Sara who says, “my favorite part about being in Ghana was getting to not only learn about the culture and how things are run but also being able to see firsthand the opportunity and difference Global Mamas makes for its employees.”

Volunteer Highlight: Living Wage Project
Prospering for Another Decade: The Fair Trade Zone

In 2013, Global Mamas reached a monumental $1,150,925 in sales. We were delighted and challenged in equal measure as we realized that we were facing the rare issue that demand had outstripped production. To address this problem, Global Mamas initiated plans in 2012 for a new production facility called the Fair Trade Zone (FTZ) with the potential to increase current production output by 54 percent. The vision for the FTZ is to help revive the Ghanaian textile industry by employing 200 women full-time in a comfortable work environment.

2013: A Year of Development

2013 was a year of development and preparation as our vision for the FTZ began coming to life. An international team of architecture students was led by Architecture Sans Frontières (Architecture Without Borders) United Kingdom to implement their participatory design process focused on making international development issues integral to architecture. Volunteers Adjoa Akowuah, Emily Wright, Kofi Ofosu-Ennin, and Lisanne De Beun traveled with their team leader, Sophie Morley, between our Ashaiman and Cape Coast sites observing the workspaces, soliciting feedback from seamstresses and batikers, and researching materials that could be used to build the eco-conscious production center. As Sophie notes, “ASF-UK is collaborating with Global Mamas to rethink spaces of production in the textiles industry. Through a participatory design process, ASF worked with the Mamas to understand the process and spatial needs for the center, with the aim to empower the Mamas to take a leading role in the creation of their new work environment.”

Innovative, Participatory, and Sustainable Design

Soon, simple cardboard cutouts and ink sketches began to resemble the reality we hope the Fair Trade Zone will become. Batikers and seamstresses alike shared specific concerns and requirements for their working environment. Changing rooms will be added to the batik area and workspace will be flexible so that batikers can decide on a useful setup. For their part, the seamstresses shared that some prefer a communal workspace, while others prefer a more personal space. In response, the architects created a variety of spaces to accommodate this request. Because consideration for the environment and sustainable development are important to Global Mamas, the architects included a design for biogas toilets. With this addition, methane gas from the toilet waste is captured in a sealed tank and then used to heat the wax and water required by the batik process. Currently, coals are used to heat wax and water, so these improvements mean Global Mamas will need to purchase less coal; methane also burns more cleanly than coal.

After nine weeks, the ASF-UK team was ready to present all their hard work in a final conceptual design. Finally, the foundations behind the Fair Trade Zone seemed a reality. With a space specifically made for a childcare center, the center fosters a comfortable working environment for mothers. Recycled and repurposed waste and local materials serve as the foundations for the nearly self-sufficient site. According to Sophie, “The concept design reflected these aspirations of all involved and ASF-UK will continue to partner with Global Mamas to help them realize the center as part of their strategic long term plans.”

What’s Next?

Though Global Mamas now has the conceptual design for the FTZ, there is still much to do before lifting it from paper into reality. Now, we’re focused on creating a detailed budget for all elements of the design. The architect team estimates the cost of land and the construction of the production facility will cost around $500,000.

To achieve this sizeable goal, the ASF-UK team worked to scale down the production facility into a modular building that can have additions added as funds are raised. For example, purchasing the land and beginning phase one, in which we’ll construct a smaller production facility, will cost $150,000. We’ve developed a fundraising plan called Building Prosperity that includes financing from private foundations, service organizations, government agencies, and individual donors. There are challenges beyond fundraising, though: Global Mamas must face the constraints of buying land and building in Ghana. We are beginning to view potential sites in the Ashaiman/Tema area to make the commute easy for employees at our current Ashaiman location.

Though the ASF-UK team was only here for nine productive weeks, the completion of our Fair Trade Zone is a long-term project upon which we continue to collaborate with ASF-UK. We look forward to further developing plans and making progress throughout 2014 and beyond to achieve this shared dream.

Sophie and volunteers working through the floor plan.

Volunteers visiting another sustainable building project.
A special thank you to the many people who contributed time, money, and passion to improving and expanding the Global Mamas community in 2013.

DONORS

$1,000+
- Azibo Society - University of St. Andrews
- Beth Davison
- Elizabeth Billman
- Erin McIlvain
- Gretchen Sunko
- J.R. Billman
- Julio Zegarra-Ballon
- Motorola Solutions Foundation (Corporate Match)
- Quilters of Chatham-Kent
- Robin Ross
- Sara Klein
- Tami & Richard Adam
- Ten Thousand Villages Asheville

$500-$999
- AIG (Corporate Match)
- Antoinette Terrana
- Gloria Kramer
- I DO Foundation
- Joanne Rupp
- Just Creations
- Katina Dorman
- Special Care Designs

$100-$499
- Annette Kennett
- Barbara Junge
- Bethany Shackelford
- Bonnie Chappell
- Brenda Fraiser
- Cali Davis
- Carmen Iezzi
- Carolyn Sechler
- Constance Schrader
- Bob & Clarissa Morley
- Dan & Jane Billman
- Daniel Sinton
- David Alexander
- Deb Oberpeul
- Deborah Kay
- Dennis & Mary Young
- Doug Nelson
- Emily Martin
- Eric Hudson
- Eric Kramer
- Erin Barnes
- Erin McIlvain
- Frances Stewart
- Gifts With Humanity
- Glenn DeRoche
- GreaterGood.org
- Housing 202 Ltd
- IBM (Corporate Match)
- Jack & Ann McCarthy
- Jay Hill
- Jean Wicks
- Jeannie Weber
- Jeff & Beth Hawthorne
- Jeff & Andra Gerlesits
- Jen Kintzle
- Jim Hickey
- Joann Staashelm
- Joanna Halk
- John & Francis Kennedy
- John A. & Lynn A. Thieman
- Kate Murphy
- Kathleen Mortenson
- Kayci Graham
- Kim McElroy
- Linda Lance
- Linda Whitmyre
- Linda Nehls
- Lisa Gondek
- Lydia Mensah
- Mary Kirkegard
- Matthew Lloyd
- Maureen Riccitello
- Megan Cain
- Microsoft (Corporate Match)
- Nance Reed
- Perry Drake
- Rebecca Riccitello
- Renice & Kevin Ward
- Sandra Carruthers
- Sarah Albers
- Sophie Morley
- Susan & Tom O’Day
- The Brick House
- The Unitarian Universalist Church
- Toni Ott
- Ten Thousand Villages
- Alexandria
- Zee Bee Market LLC

"Global Manas is helping me in more ways than I could have imagined. They have taught me skills like bookkeeping and making quality goods, which are helping me advance my reputation and thus my business."
- Martina Obeng

VOLUNTEERS

- Adjoa Akowuah
- Sarah Albers
- Simran Basra
- Lee Bernstein
- Elizabeth Billman
- Maral Binizan
- Catherine Black
- Amelia Brandt
- Emma Brophy
- Marlene Eugenie Daaman
- Lisanne De Beun
- Sandra Desautels
- Olivia Deters
- (Fanta) Nourdine Diao
- Jenna Doerfler
- Katina Dorman
- Barbara Fontaine
- Jessica Fox
- Sabrina Ghidi
- Katherine Gordon
- Jessica Graham
- Jane Graham
- Jesse Guzman
- Adam Hassler
- Molly Hodges
- Tricia Hoyt
- Miebi Ife
- Miki Iwamura
- Madelynne Jones
- Blair Kanis
- Sara Klein
- Daniel Larson
- Jonas Ledberg
- Harriet Levy
- Abby Lewis
- Kayla McCarver
- Megan McConnell
- Sophie Morley
- Pia Nielsen
- Kofi Ofusoo-Ennin
- Keri O’Mara
- Arpitha Paramesh
- Päivi Pöyhönen
- Margo Prie
- Rebecca Ressler
- Sarah Rogers
- Joy Seaver
- Tine Skygebjerg
- Emily Wright
- Mahlet Yared
- Jill Zarestky

A special thanks to our 2013 Annual Report contributors: Paige Affinito, Jaclyn Beidronski, Amelia Brandt, Jessica Fox, Emma Shearman, Ericka Wallis.
Ashaiman based batiker, Lydia, focuses intently on lining up the stamp for a popular batik design, Marrakech.

Thanks to the efforts of these wonderful retail partners who sell at least $1,000 of our products, the Mamas’ work reaches the hands of individuals around the world.

21Tara
Accessories for Hope
Alternatives Global Marketplace
Anahata
Artisans’ Hope
Awaken
Bakshesh
Ball & Soul
Bella Figlia
Bicycle Soap Company LLC
Big Myrtle’s Tea Shoppe and Egg Emporium
BluGnu Products
Branch Out
Browse Around Cottage
Buffalo Mountain Food Coop & Cafe
Cameron’s
Change Boutique
Charity USA
Come Together Trading Company
Congregational United Church of Christ
Connected
Creative Women of the World
Divas Fair Trade
Doodads, Inc.
Eco Fair Trading Limited
Effie’s Fair Trade Store
Estrog, LLC
Exotique
Fair and Square Imports
Fair Trade Decor
Fair Trade Winds
Far Away Places
Farrington’s
Fetching Pretty
Flavours of Life
Fran Kennedy
Fresh Indulgence
Fusion Bath and Body Products
Gelegeima
Gifts With Humanity
Gina’s Fine Gifts & Framing
Global Gifts
Global Girlfriend
Global Heart
Global Infusion
Global Village Collection
Gluby
GrassRoots Fair Trade
Greater World Gifts
Greens N Grains
Hands of Faith
Heifer International
Herring Choker Deli
Highland Books
Hill Country Haiku
Idiosyncrazies, LLC
Isae
Johari Creations
Jubilee Global Gifts
Just Creations
Just Fare Market
Just Good Trade
Just Goods
Karma Fair Trade
Kindred Handcrafts
Knit Wit Yarn Shop
Latitudes Fair Trade
Laurie Dahl
Libra
Lincoln County Pharmacy
Marafiki Fair Trade

“One of my biggest dreams when I joined Global Mamas was to send my children to University. By the grace of God, it’s like a dream has come true. My daughter is at University, I’m happy!”

- Juliana Mustapha

Florence Thannie proudly showing the Weekend Bag she sews with her staff.
Our Mission
The Global Mamas community works together to create a life of prosperity—financial well-being, happiness, and health—for African women and their families. We achieve prosperity by creating and selling handmade products of the highest quality.

Our Values
- We believe in the strength of community.
- We have a long-term commitment to each other and to the organization.
- We are innovators dedicated to quality, creativity, and continuous improvement.
- We are committed to achieving economic self-sufficiency: as individuals and as an organization.
- We are part of a global community that creates positive change through the work we do.

How You Can Get Involved
Donate Fund the sustainable growth of businesses and women’s empowerment in Ghana with a tax-deductible donation. Learn more about making a donation online at www.globalmamas.org/Info/Donate

Purchase Products By purchasing Global Mamas products, you are offering women in Ghana the opportunity to achieve prosperity. All proceeds go directly to the women and nonprofit programs that assist them with business development. Shop online today at www.shopglobalmamas.com

Volunteer in Ghana Volunteers work directly with the women of the Global Mamas community to expand their businesses. Through a short-term volunteer assignment, you will be able to use your skills to help others and make a difference in the future of the women and their families in Ghana. Learn more online at www.globalmamas.org/Volunteers

Contact Us: www.globalmamas.org.
Global Mamas U.S.
P.O. Box 18323
Minneapolis, MN 55418
USA
+1-800-338-3032
wholesale@globalmamas.org

Global Mamas Ghana
P.O. Box CC890
Cape Coast
Ghana
+233(0)244-530-467